acvapeda@yahoo.com

Articles will be published in the AACL Bioflux Journal, known as a specialty journal in the field of aquaculture, fish genetics, ichthyology, aquatic ecology and other adjacent scientific branches of aquatic life.

Before being published, the papers will be reviewed by a committee made from specialists. The papers content must have a high scientific value. Correct quotations of references are essential for accepting the paper in the volume, and using the correct and coherent English language is absolutely obligatory. Contrary, the authors will be asked to get in touch with the scientific board, - zoobiomag2004@yahoo.com - in order to make the necessary corrections and review in useful time.

The journal is not compromising the on-time publishing of articles due to papers send with delays or because of authors that cannot be contacted. Late papers, held and accepted for publishing can be included in the next volume of the open access journal AACL Bioflux.

In the last issues of the journal, specialists from wide world have published, the journal being indexed in several tens of international databases (eg. ISI Web of Knowledge Platform (Thomson Scientific – Master Journal List: Zoological Record and CABI), Scopus Elsevier (SNIP = 0.943), Index Copernicus (ICV=9.00), Scimago Journal Rank (SJR=0.031), OVID LinkSolver, Ulrich's Periodicals Directory, Serials Solutions, DOAJ, SOCOLAR, ICAAP, Google Scholar, EBSCO, SCIRUS, NSDL, CNCSIS (B+), Polish Ministry of Science and Higher Education – 2.00 pts/article, Smithsonian Institution Database and several tens of digital libraries !!!).

Publishing papers in this journal is an opportunity for researchers to make themselves and their work known via the color pages (without supplementary fees) as hard copy and also as on-line version.
